The Value of Cuba.

No doubt there are serious objections to the ac quisition of Cuba by the United States of America. In the first place there is the important want of a causa belli to justify anything like a forcible seizure. In not making with Spain such treaties as England has done, the covenanting with her for the suppression of the slave trade, and paying her money as the within. Hence the frequent divorces—the unhappy price of her consent, America has deprived herself of a justifying cause for warlike proceedings against and reckless husbands. The returns are not yet complete, but there is no doubt the census now being taken will show the population of Baltimore to be over 180,000, if it does not go up to 185,000. On a green, grassy knoll, by the banks of the brook That so long and so often had watered his flock, The old farmer rests in his long and last sleep, While the waters a low pleasing lullaby keep. So rich with its blossoms, so thrifty and fair,

And the seat where he sat by the old cottage door, In the still summer's eve, when his labors were o'er,

'Twas a gloom-giving day when the old farmer died; The stout-hearted mourned, the affectionate cried; And the prayers of the just for his rest did ascend, For they all lost a Brother, a Man, and a Friend

CANADA AND THE FUCITIVE SLAVES .- Great number ber of fugitive slaves have made their escape into Canada; and the increase of negro population has been so rapid and extensive, that some of the Canada papers begin to complain on the subject. They are afraid that they may have "too much of a good thing;" and suggest the expediency of putting a re-straint upon this negro emigration. The Amherst-burg Courier says: "We have been favored for the last four or five days by an influx of the colored population from the States, whose advent, though honorable to the province as a land of liberty, could be very beneficially dispensed with by the peaceable inhabitants of this frontier. On this side sable clouds of immigrants are disembarked from every boat that stops, and be-tween one and two hundred have already arrived at this port. A like rapid influx continues at all points along the frontier as far as heard from; and if some action be not taken by the Legislature in the matter, this part of the province must be overwhelmed by our colored brethren. When, some years ago, the poor inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland flocked over to this province too rapidly our liberal Government imposed a poll tax upon all persons landing on our shores from the other side of the Atlantic. Much more necessary is such a provision to prevent our being flocked by a black population. Let us see if our rulers will impose it."

AN AFFECTIONATE SISTER .- On Saturday morning beautiful young lady, residing in the country, applied to Mr. Coachman, the gentlemanly clerk in the Keeper's office, City Prison, asking of him the privilege to see a beloved brother, who had been consigned to the Tombs for five days, on a charge of being frunk and disorderly. The fair applicant was politely informed that the rules of the Prison forbade five-day prisoners being seen until their term of imprisonment had expired; "but," said Mr. Coachman, "your brother will be discharged at three o'clock this afternoon, at which time, if you call, you eyes, stated to several persons present that the obpiece of money, he set his hands on his hips, and who had bestowed on him all the advantages which stood, taking breath apparently before ejecting his wealth could afford, but that a few months since he married a young woman whose course of conduct produced domestic dissentions and grief, which he sought to drown in the intoxicating cup. After re-lieving her sorrowful heart of its load of grief, she left the office, but returned again in the afternoon, when she met and embraced her brother, whom she expostulated most earnestly with as to the fatal course he was pursuing, after which they left the prison together. The backslider is fortunate in having such a sister, and may he profit by her truthful admonitions. The scene was well calculated to draw tears from the most hardened of even the sterner sex.
